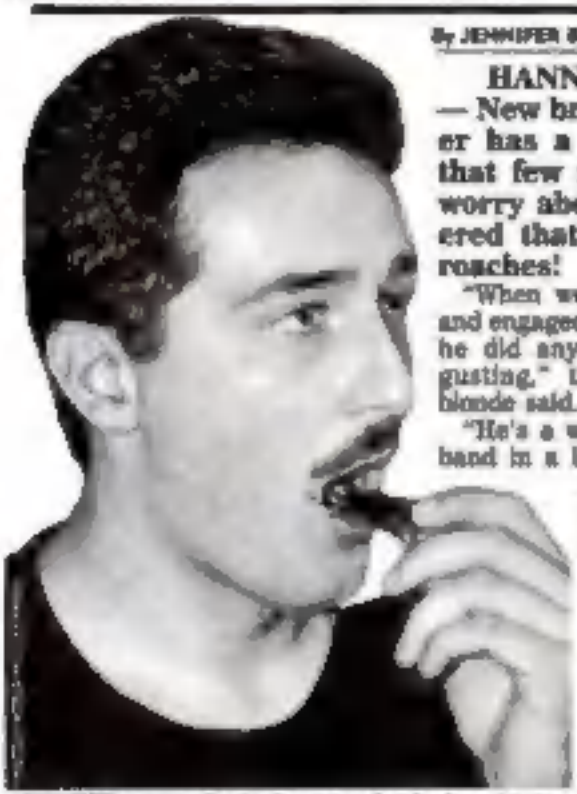
MOON DRIFTING TOWARD EARTH

MY WACKY HUBBY EATS ROACHES

By JENNIFER BROOKES / Weekly World News



"ROACHES are one of nature's most perfect foods, and tasty, too," says wacko Werner Muller, above, as he hungrily chows down on one of the scrumptious bite-size creepy crawlers.

HANNOVER, Germany — New bride Elisabeth Muller has a shocking problem that few newlyweds have to worry about — she's discovered that her husband eats roaches!

"When we were dating and engaged I had no idea he did anything so disgusting," the attractive blonde said.

"He's a wonderful husband in a lot of way but the way he eats bugs is almost too much for me to handle."

WIFE Elisabeth.

Bug-eating Werner Muller says he didn't intentionally hide his unusual habit from Elisabeth before they got married.

"When we were dating we would eat out a lot and when I'm at a restaurant that's about the only time I don't eat roaches," he said. "It's so natural for me to eat roaches that it never even occurs to me that people think there's anything wrong with it."

'He mixes them with cereal, muffins & even meatloaf,' says grossed-out bride

Werner says he started his bizarre diet a couple of years ago when the house he moved into was infested with the creepy critters. Being a biologist, he knew they had good nutritional value so he decided to try eating a few of them.

"I must admit I was a little squeamish about eating them so the first time I sauteed them in butter and then drowned them in chocolate syrup," he said. "I was surprised at how tasty they were, kind of crunchy."

WEIRD Werner eats roaches with his breakfast cereal, left, and even spices up his pancakes, above, with the crunchy critters.

Since then Werner has developed such an appetite for the little buggers that he now has to raise his own to keep enough on hand for his meals — and the whole thing gives Elisabeth the creeps.

"He mixes them with cereal, muffins and even meatloaf," she says. "It's gotten the house. Even the neighbors know about them. It's embarrassing because they come up to me and ask if Werner's still eating roaches.

Shape of your child's face reveals musical talent!

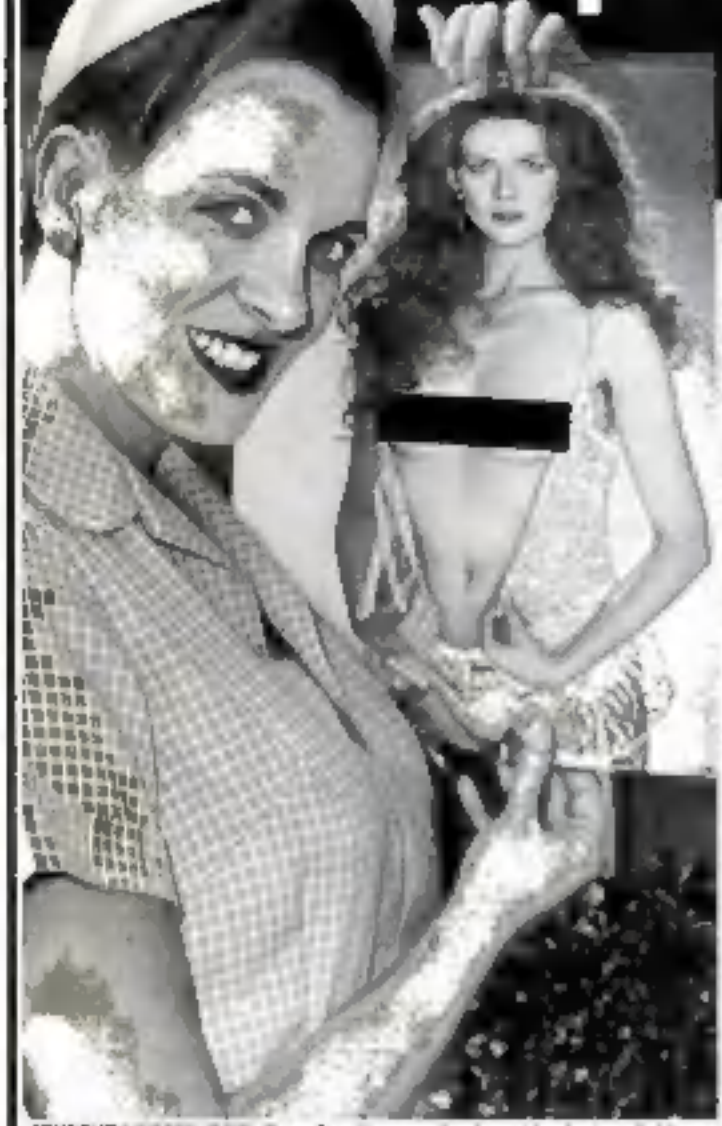
There may be a simple way to find out if you have a musical ability — just look at your face.

Many great musicians, including Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms, Schubert and all four of the Beatles were left-faced, says Dr. Karl Smith, a psychologist. So were Tchaikovsky and 98 percent of all opera singers in New York's famous Metropolitan Opera in the last half of this century.

Whichever side of your face is larger, more muscular, flexible and sports a dimple is the giveaway. The eyebrows on your prominent side should also be higher, and the skin smoother.

Right-faced folks wind up becoming dancers, mathematicians, great orators and public leaders, says Dr. Smith.

Hospital food made my boobs go bust!



STUDENT NURSE/MODEL Fiona Sewell — sporting breast implants — holds up photo of herself before her assets were reduced by a case of food poisoning.

By SCOTTY PAUL
Weekly World News

Nurse Fiona Sewell says she got food poisoning in a hospital cafeteria — and it made her breasts shrink.

I went from a 36C to a 32A, says student nurse!

Furious Fiona, 22, claims her bust dwindled from a sexy 36C to a tiny 32A after she was hospitalized with salmonella poisoning.

The part-time model and student nurse claims she was one of several people stricken with food poisoning at the hospital in 1997.

She was hospitalized for two weeks.

"My bust was ample before. It was one of my main assets.

"I enjoyed nursing, but I wanted to continue modeling as well," said furious Fiona, who bares her assets to deliver kissograms in Rubgy, England.

"After I fell ill, my breasts just vanished . . . almost overnight.

"It was very distressing," said Fiona.

"My long hair, which was past my bottom, fell out and my skin flaked off."

Her shrunken breasts cost her a boyfriend and topless modelling jobs, she said.

"My breasts weren't anything to look at anymore.

"My boyfriend said I looked like a man and so did my kissogram customers.

"I hated the way I looked. I just could not fill a dress anymore," said Fiona.

The distraught nurse underwent surgery to boost her breasts back to their former glory. The silicone implants put the treasure back in her chest, she said.

Fiona switched her training to another hospital before her operation last August.

She hasn't decided yet but she may sue the hospital where she got food poisoning.

"But at least I have my breasts back again," she said.

WORLD'S LUCKIEST MAN

. . . keeps beating the odds!

By RICK TRACY / Weekly World News

TULSA, Okla. — Long-shot Larry Luncefield has twice cheated death and become a rich man because of an uncanny knack of beating seemingly impossible odds.

The 28-year-old pharmaceutical salesman has:

- Been struck by lightning, 600,000 to 1 odds.
- Walked away from a plane crash without a scratch, 37,000 to 1 odds.
- Won a $250,000 lottery jackpot with a single ticket, 6.2 million to 1 odds.
- Hit the jackpot on a slot machine, 900 to 1 odds.
- Married a virgin, 15 to 1 odds.

"I've gotta be the luckiest man on Earth," Larry said. "I should have been dead and buried a long time ago. I must have a guardian angel watching over me."

Larry was struck by a bolt of lightning while golfing during a Florida vacation in 1963.

"I had headaches for about a week but that's about all," he said. "I didn't even miss a day's work."

Two years later Larry survived the crash of a twin-engine private plane that killed the pilot.

"We were sitting inches apart. I walked away from the wreckage but he died. I guess it wasn't my time to go," he remarked.

Six months later Larry married an attractive secretary he had met at work. And unlike many women in their 30s, she was a virgin, who had her first sexual experience on their wedding night.

Everything Larry touched turned to gold on their honeymoon in Las Vegas.

"I paid for our honeymoon by hitting the quarter slots jackpot for $3,600 and won $900 at the blackjack table," he said.

Luck and trouble sidestepped the young salesman until last January when he bought a lottery ticket for $1 and won $250,000.

"It was only the second time I'd ever bought a lottery ticket. I almost passed out when I saw the winning numbers in the paper," he remarked.

In case you're wondering about the odds of all these things happening to the same person, they would be truly insurmountable, probably to the billions to 1.

28-year-old salesman has:

- Been struck by lightning
- Walked away from a plane crash
- Won a $250,000 lottery
- Hit the jackpot on a slot machine
- And even married a virgin

AGAINST ALL ODDS: Larry Luncefield has survived two lightning encounters with death and won over $300,000 gambling.

Motorist claims his CAR told him to ram police cruiser!

NATCHITOCHES, La. — When cops asked a motorist why he rammed his Mercedes-Benz into their cruiser, he looked them straight in the eye — and said his car told him to do it.

"Actually, he said his expensive German-made car ordered him to kill an American-made auto," Police Officer Jim Pugels explained. "I guess he didn't know how to do that."

But police said Simpson Williams Jr. gave it the old college try after they arrived at the scene where Williams' car struck a fence and slammed into a pole.

NEW STUDY PROVES:

Neat & sloppy odd couples make best mates!

GLOBAL NEWS SERVICE

"Odd couples" — unions in which one spouse is neat and the other sloppy — are very common . . . and these mismatched mates actually get along better than a great many other couples!

That's the surprising new finding of psychologist Dr. Herbert Hoffman, who just completed a study of these relationships.

"About 70 percent of all marriages are made up of 'odd couples,'" says Dr. Hoffman.

"And it's a real advantage when 'neat' and 'sloppy' marry. Like-minded people don't get along with each other nearly as well as 'odd couples' — who seem to get more of a kick, more excitement and fun out of their relationship."

But, cautioned Dr. Hoffman, the neat partner shouldn't try to change the sloppy one — be or she was born that way!

"One of the amazing things research has uncovered was that people are actually born with either a neat or sloppy trait as part of their personality," he explained.

To avoid any of the small problems that do crop up when "neat" and "sloppy" marry, Dr. Hoffman suggested saving as many "his" and "her" personal items as possible — like separate tubes of toothpaste.

"A neat person is always going to squeeze from the bottom of the tube — and the messy person is always going to grab it up the middle and just squeeze," he said. "You and your mate can be fighting over this all the years you're married — unless you eliminate the tension by getting separate tubes."

CBs ARE BACK!

Top exers are trading cellular phones for citizen band radios!

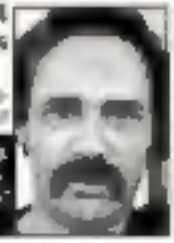
HOT wels truckers use CB radios!

By RICK TRACY / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — Citizens band radios will replace cellular phones as the most popular Christmas gift this year among America's high-class professionals.

"What has been a mash-and mole-of communication between truckers, campers and other middle-class Americans for nearly half a century will soon be a valuable new toy for doctors, lawyers, professors and businessmen," said a spokesmen for the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

The cellular phone fad has run its course, communications experts say. Skyrocketing costs, service outages and "just plain common sense" are encouraging yuppies and other professionals to make the switch to CB radios.



HEAD OF CB CLUB. Mayor "Barber Bones" Moorhead

More and more people are packing away their cellular phones and driving along the same CB highways as Burt Reynolds and the truckers in the movie Smokey and the Bandit.

"That movie and the old Dukes of Hazzard TV series do more to popularize CB radios than anything else," said Jesse Moorhead of Montgomville, Va., whose CB handle is "Barber Bones."

"Quite enough, we're going to be hearing handles like Sasquatch, Mouthpiece, and Egghead when these doctors, lawyers and college professors plug in their CBs," said Moorhead, who has boasted a CB club in southern Virginia for 20 years.

Cellular phones can cost from $79.95 up to $900. The basic monthly service charge plus cent-per-minute rates have made cellular phones an expensive luxury.

On the other hand, a CB radio costs $69.95 and there are no monthly fees. You can install it in your home, your Auto-Rayce or your pickup truck.

"Turning on your CB is like tuning in on an old-fashioned par-to the telephone as you drive down the road," Moorhead said. "You can get instant info on traffic conditions, accidents, medical or road service and detours. And some good buddy is always eager to let you know where Smokey has set up a speed trap."

There are an estimated 40 million CB units in operation in the United States and several million more around the world. Those who make their living in the communications industry expect Christmas sales to increase this figure to 50 million.

Most people told a secret in strict confidence never dream of repeating it any other way.

A GOOD SEX LIFE CAN HELP MAKE YOU A SUCCESS

WORLD PICTURE FEED

A good sex life can make you feel better about yourself outside the bedroom — and even make you more successful at work and at home.

"This is the secret power of sex in your life," says Dr. Barbara DeAngelis, author of How to Make Love All the Time.

"Whether you know it or not, the way you make love may be affecting how you talk to your boss at work, how you get a point across to your spouse in an argument and how well you pursue success.

"Sex is one of the most powerful ways to establish your self-image, and each time you have sex, you strengthen the behavior that emerges during your sexual experience."

For example, if you're passive in bed, you'll tend to be passive in life with each lovemaking session reinforcing that passive behavior in and out of bed.

And if you're not getting the satisfaction you want in bed, you may become conditioned to expect little out of daily life. That negative attitude can damage your confidence — and make you less likely to succeed in situations such as asking the boss for a raise or getting something you want from family and friends.

"But when you feel you're a good lover and are desired by another, your sense of self-worth increases," says Dr. DeAngelis.

"If in bed you feel powerful, confident and respected, you can experience the same feelings across the board — at work, with your spouse and your family and friends."

So if you want to change the way you relate to others in day-to-day life, one of the best places to start is in bed, says Dr. DeAngelis. "You'll see results immediately — because changing the patterns of your sexual experience can make a big difference in changing your personality."

MOON WILL EARTH — IN FIVE YEARS!

By MARK CLAYTON / Weekly World News

WASHINGTON — The moon is drifting toward Earth in a slow but inexorable fall from orbit and if something doesn't give, mankind will perish when worlds that have existed side by side for billions of years collide — possibly within the next five years!

That's the word from astronomer Mark Crosler, who cites NASA sources as saying that "something is happening out there — something that we don't understand and are absolutely powerless to stop."

And in an unusually pointed memo to President Bill Clinton, the space agency warned that "the collision of the moon and Earth will be preceded by devastating changes in our tides and weather in the very near future."

"We've got problems, big problems, and all we can do is wait for them to go away — or get worse," said Dr. Crosler.

"Needless to say, President Clinton is gravely concerned.

"And a major fear is that people will panic long before we feel the direct physical effects of our drifting moon. From a purely scientific viewpoint, it is a fascinating — if somewhat mysterious — turn of celestial events," he added.

"The moon drifting in space defies scientific explanation."

NASA declined to comment on the expert's report, although a spokesman admitted that the space agency is monitoring the position of the moon "quite literally around the clock."

Dr. Crosler said NASA noticed a change in the moon's position during a routine "sky scan" on January 31.

As every schoolchild knows, the moon's distance from the Earth normally varies from a maximum of 252,800 miles to a minimum of 225,600 miles.

But now, for the first time in recorded history the moon is a mere 224,000 miles away. And while that might not sound like much of a variance, astronomers agree that it is "a potentially cataclysmic change of order in our solar system."

"Life as we know it is governed by the delicate positioning of Earth in relation to the sun," said Dr. Crosler.

"If the moon continues to drift closer to Earth, the gravitational imbalance will bring about dramatic and devastating changes in our tides and weather, causing floods, tornadoes, droughts, hurricanes and electrical storms unlike anything the world has ever seen.

"These conditions will certainly cause great distress and, most likely, the collapse of civilization long before the moon collides with Earth."

According to NASA, the moon appears to be moving toward Earth at the wildly fluctuating rate of 6 feet to 991 miles

Doomsday collision is inevitable

CRASH INTO

SECRET NASA moon predicts abrupt changes in weather as the moon draws closer to Earth.

a day. And while such erratic movement makes it impossible to predict the exact date when the moon and Earth will collide, most experts speculate that the disaster will occur within five years.

"On a 'high' note, most if not all of us will be dead long before the moon hits," Dr. Crosby said.

Wacky new fad . . .

MOONBATHING!

Thousands of teens are getting their tans at night!

By SANDY JEFFRIES / Weekly World News

MALIBU, Calif. — The weirdest new fad to come along in years is "moonbathing" — a bizarre pastime in which teens lie around on beach towels in the dead of night, trying to get a tan.

And amazingly, thousands of the youngsters swear it really works.

"Moonbathing gives my body a nice even bronze coloring," says Cyndi Grunwal, a 17-year-old high school senior.

"And I don't have to worry about ultraviolet rays giving me sunburn or skin cancer.

"I try to lay out in the moonlight for at least an hour, three or four times a week."

And oddly, even some adults think there may be something to it.

TEEN'S MOM Jill Grunwal

SOCIOLOGIST Dr. Hugh Brande

Physicals acknowledge that the light from the moon is in fact sunlight reflected off the lunar surface, but most scientists deny that it's possible to get a "brown tan."

However that doesn't prevent thousands of sun-worshipping teens from filling southern California beaches night after night. Cops are kept busy driving home all the way down to San Diego.

"It's a real problem," said an overwhelmed Laguna Beach cop charged with enforcing trespassing laws on private beaches.

"There's more of them every night. We don't even book them anymore. There's just too many of them. We just run them off."

Sociologist Dr. Hugh Brande says the fad is bound to spread to the rest of the country. But most other experts are skeptical.

"These things always seem to start in California," said Dr. Brande. "I'm sure that by August there will be fresh signs in Arkansas will have tried moonbathing."

Man grumbling to pal: "I can't help being depressed. I just realized it's costing me more to insure my car than my life."

'And I drink shots with the best of 'em,' says the brainy beauty

SIZZLING sexy actress Brooke Shields made her squeaky clean image.

Super-suave Britons: spy James Bond would hang his head in shame if he knew what happened to the actor who plays him, Pierce Brosnan.

The handsome star was refused service at London's Savoy Hotel — because he was wearing jeans!

Witnesses say Brosnan was a little shaken — but stirred.

Perennial crowdpleasing singer Tom Jones is almost as famous for having women's panties thrown at him as he is for his singing.

The 64-year-old hip-swiveler recalls the first time he got a pair of ladies' unders as he performed.

It was at the Copacabana in New York in 1964," says Jones.

"I was sweating and suddenly this woman at the front stood up and it was up with the skirt, down with the drawers and she lobbed them to me. And I went pleasure and used them to wipe my forehead.

"But there was this newspaper columnist in the audience and he put it in his column.

"And all of a sudden

Aging folk singer Bob Dylan ordered minibars when he drove a 52-foot truck to a dirty hotel in Manchester, England, that wouldn't even have the best room in the place.

The seedy burger demanded the presidential suite but when he was told it was occupied he had such a temper tantrum that he had to be escorted out on the street — at 2 a.m.

He was looking for a room in the middle of the night after he decided the hotel he was already in just wasn't good enough for him.

As it turns out a British TV star named Michael Barrymore was in the room Dylan wanted.

This raucous lady knows only as Yolgaring hails from Chilly Denmark, but the charming starlet managed to keep things up in bonnie across America with recent appearances on TV's Jo Living Color, Tequila and Bonetti and The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air. The mouth-watering model-turned-actress also made her mark in movies like Rookie with Clint Eastwood and Dance a Hoop, I Love Up the Baby.

What you should have in your medicine cabinet!

The most important item to keep in your medicine chest is an Ace elastic bandage, says an expert — who reveals the items every household should have on hand.

"When you need pressure to stop bleeding, place an Ace bandage over the area and apply pressure until you can get to the hospital. Ace bandages are also wonderful for strains," declares Dr. Arjun Chanmugam, an emergency medicine expert.

If you're selecting items to include in your medicine cabinet, "I recommend you keep it simple — keep it to the bare minimum," said Dr. Chanmugam.

Here's his list of basic supplies:

Ace bandage, plastic bandages, an antihistamine such as Benadryl, hydrogen peroxide as an antiseptic, ibuprofen or acetaminophen, a thermometer, heating pad and instant cold pack.

Also include a book on first aid, scissors (to cut bandages), a list of emergency numbers, a record of the family and a list of allergies for each person in the family.

Other items you might stock are antiseptic ointment, cough syrup, decongestant, Bactine if you have small children, antacid, antidiarrheal medication and tweezers.

Dr. Chanmugam also recommends that you keep a watchful eye on expiration dates, and don't leave unharmed medicine bottles in your medicine cabinet.

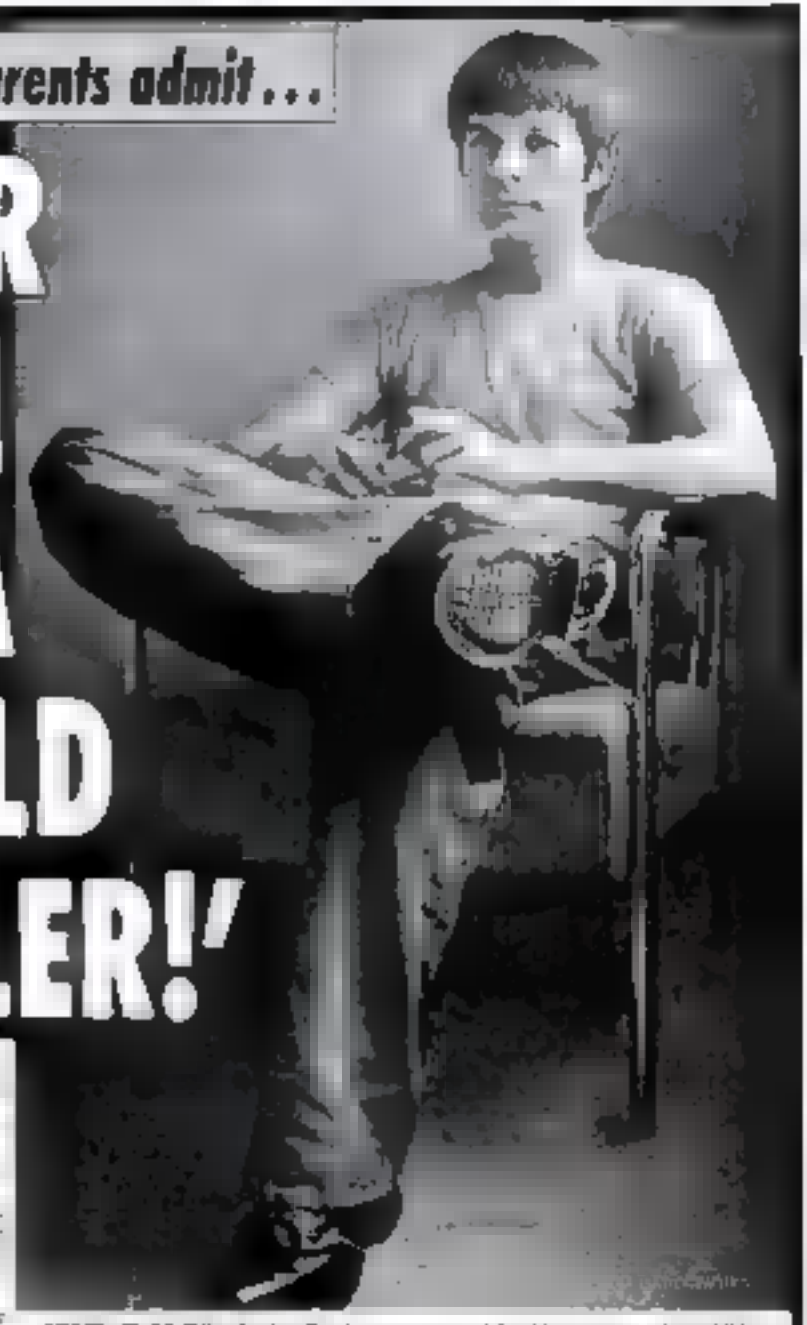
HUMILIATED Bud and Mildred Goode stood by their perverted son Freddy to the bitter end.

Shattered parents admit...

'OUR SON IS A CHILD KILLER!'



By SUSAN JIMISON

Hardworking parents Bud and Mildred Goode of Washington, D.C., did everything they could think of to raise a fine, upstanding son — but their child became a monster who wound up dying in the electric chair for raping and strangling little boys!

The sleepy killer, Freddy Goode, repulsed even his own mom and dad when he wrote letters to the parents of his victims describing in graphic detail how they died. He went to his death on April 3, 1981, unrepentant of his disgusting crimes and blaming them on society.

"I'm proud of the fact that I murdered those children," said Goode, 26, of his elementary school aged victims, "because society, a people dead against me because I'm a child molester.

"My execution is the only thing I want because I'll never have sex with young boys again unless I escape which is not possible."

Freddy had been a terrible from early childhood, spending time with psychiatrists and school counselors from an early age but making no progress.

The boy was ugly, cruel and weak — and when he grew into his teens or near-molesting little boys. Freddy got more and more frustrated, often stupidly so he could entice him. Mildred prayed for him, but it didn't help.

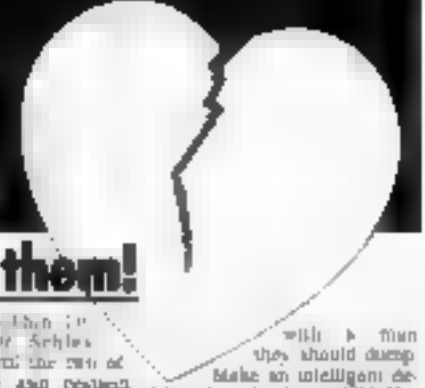
6 mistakes women make that wreck their love lives



. . . and how to avoid them!

When it comes to relationships with men, women sometimes do the dumbest things.

"There are six major things they do to mess up their lives, but they can avoid them by breaking my advice," declares top author and marriage and family therapist Dr. Laura Schlessinger.

Here are the mistakes and Dr. Schlessinger's tips to set things right:

1. Living solely through a man. Women who let a man provide their entire identity for them don't realize how easily that relationship can end. Then they're left devastated and angry. "Be the best you can be in your own right," says Dr. Schlessinger, a top psychologist.

"Take night classes, read, take up hobbies. Only by feeling good about yourself will you enjoy your relationship."

2. Settling for a male. Desperate women settle for any man. Don't settle for anyone and wait for the right one.

It may take longer to find the right guy but you won't be stuck with a loser.

3. Confusing gossip for love. Too many women have an air of feeling of emptiness or hunger for approval. The result: Disaster. Not too much can make you feel worthless. Wait and choose a partner you've gotten to like as a person first.

4. Starting off with a mate: "Studies show that couples who live together before marriage are one third more likely to break up within 10 years," says Dr. Schlessinger. "What will the two of you share, after the honeymoon ends with each other? Then get married."

5. Expecting too much from a male. Women with low self-esteem expect marriage to bring total fulfillment. But they're doomed to disappointment when Prince Charming doesn't meet expectations.

Choose a compatible mate, not a man you think will solve your problems.

6. Having a baby for the wrong reason. Women who have a child to fix a broken relationship often become trapped with a man they should dump. Make an intelligent decision about having a child. You have the power over your body. Use it.

MY AMERICA By

THINK OUR GREAT COUNTRY IS SICK?

Here are five things that will change your mind:

I'm madder than Uncle Sam with bubble gum in his goatee over all this blubbering and gnashing of teeth about what sad shape our great nation is in.

Bullfeathers, I say. Right off the top of my head, I can give you five good reasons why the State of the Union is coming up roses, by gum:

1. A recent poll by Fashion Research Inc. shows that the majority of American women are re- place was in the kitchen.

turning to 1940s- and '50s-style dress, indicating a nostalgic longing for the Golden Age of the American Family — when gals knew their cipients receive each year for pain repairs is being phased out. I'm working with Bic to get lighters and batteries — and now these jobless mothers on the welfare rolls will have to pay for them too.

3. First Lady Hillary Clinton will NOT be allowed to kick out the first ball to open the National Football League season this year. It was a disgrace to this sport's spirit to have Ol' Thunderthighs do the honors for the past two seasons, she says.

4. As the year 2000 looms closer and closer, record numbers of Americans are returning to church. Their fear that the end of the world will come with the millennium has most sane folks pressing their pants — and that's a good thing, by jiminy.

5. A great solution to our immigration headache will soon become a reality. A tornado form the size of Rhode Island is being created in Texas to give illegal Mexicans a place to work for the American Dream. This place will not only provide jobs for all those workers — it'll make sure that the world will suffer no spaghetti sauce shortages for the next 1,000 years!

These boobs are made for gawking — at 54?

I almost threw up a mouthful of Old Crow in my fried pork skins when I opened the May issue of Playboy magazine and spotted that old hag Naomi Sibelius topless.

I thought it a bit odd that she made that horrible 1980s song "Those Girls Love Me But They Want Me Dead" her theme song.

I hate to say you guys, but no normal American man wants to see too much of a lady's bazoombas after she's hit 21 or so.

It may sound cruel, but that's a fact, Jack.

BOY, 10, SUES DIVORCED MOM FOR HIS TOYS

by JOE BERGER (World News Service)

CHICAGO — Heartsick fifth-grader Freddie DeSenno is suing his divorced mom for a whopping $100,000 — claiming the irate lady has refused to let him play with his toys or his beloved pooch Rudy for more than a year!

Dejected Freddie says his mother Kendra has kept his prize playthings stashed away in her attic since she moved out of her home in April and left to move in with his dad Andrew.

"Mom's mad at me because I wanted to live with Dad instead of her, so she won't let me have any of my stuff," the shocked schoolboy told a reporter.

"When I call her on the phone or my dad calls her, she won't even say anything — she just hangs up!

"I miss all my toys and I miss Rudy, our beagle. He was my best friend. I'm scared he'll think I don't love him anymore."

But Freddie and his father are preparing a lawsuit seeking the return of the pooch, let him play with his toys and buy a dog and more than $2,000 worth of stuff that Kendra refuses to give back.

"She won't let me have any of my stuff because I live with my dad!"

Dear Dotti: A couple of gals at our annual company picnic got drunk and decided to stage a hot dog-eating contest. I don't know if you've ever participated in one of these things, but the idea is to turn on all the men by eating the dogs in a suggestive manner.

To make a long story short, I got in — and won hands down. Now all the guys at work are hounding me for a date. And some of the lewd comments I've been hearing are enough to make you clean up. How can I put this contest behind me and get them to shut up? My sanity depends on it! — Barry in Vero Beach

Dear Barry: I've seen many a hot dog eating contest at our company picnic but nobody dared give the dog gaff. That's probably because the first and only man who made a smart comment STILL does have crystal where he talks!

Sweet revenge: I spiked Mom's pie with laxatives!

Dear Dotti: I'm feeling so guilty I could cry. It all started when I got mad at my mom for just giving me $2k to go to the movies. I'm 31 and when she refused to give me the cash I spiked an apple pie she made with a handful of laxatives. Usually, nobody eats the pie but her. But this time, she invited a bunch of people from her office over to play cards — and served it to them. She can imagine what happened next and I feel terrible about it. Face-lift has made me uglier than ever!

Dear Dotti: I scrimped and saved for 10 long years to get a face-lift. I've mailed since I was a woman of 50. When I finally got the cash together, I picked a doctor out of the phone book and now, under the knife I have never recovered fully — and look so bad I'm ashamed to leave the house. I mean it, Dotti. I look like a baboon. The doctor told me to "give the surgery some time" — but I think he botched the job. What should I do? — Horrified in Atlanta

Dear Horrified: SYMPATHY who got a face-lift looks like they got their head stuck in a vacuum cleaner and you're no exception. The bottom line? Stop trying to hang on to your remaining youth — and get like the power you are!

My brother is stealing our neighbor's underwear

Dear Dotti: My 11-year-old brother swipes panties from our neighbor's clothesline and when she complains to my mother, my brother blames me! I don't know what he's up to, but since I'm a girl, Mom believes his lies and punishes me. I've tried to tell her the truth, but she doesn't believe me. I'm sick of my brother's crap and want my revenge. Help me, Dotti. What should I do? — Framed in Syracuse

Dear Framed: This brother of yours deserves a dose of his own medicine — and here's how you spoon it out. First, steal a pair of your neighbor's panties and hide them under the little creep's bed. Just be sure to leave the whistle before he finds them!

Will my boss promote me if I blackmail him?

Dear Serena: I have some information about my boss that would really humiliate him if his family knew about it. As far as I know, I'm the only person who has this information — and I can't decide what to do with it.

The thing is, I really like my boss. He's a pretty good guy. But whenever I try to talk to him about giving me a raise or a promotion he says it's out of the question. He tells me it's just a business decision and it's nothing personal but I have the feeling that if I threaten to reveal what I know about him, he'd find a way to advance my career in the company. TRAGIC remains of the bombed-out federal building in Oklahoma City

By TEDDY GERALD
World Herald Staff

Americans are mad as hell and they're not going to take it anymore!

Even as rescuers continued to pore through the rubble of the bombed out federal building in Oklahoma City in search of bodies, an outraged nation began discussing how to deal with the cowardly conspirators who committed the most deadly terrorist act in American history.

"They've ruined thousands of lives and they deserve to die like the animals they are!" fumed office worker Harriet Dennis of Houston.

If I were the judge, I would:

- ◯ Take the creeps into the middle of the Everglades, tie them naked to a row of tree stumps ... and leave them there for the alligators and mosquitoes to finish off.
- ◯ Send them all to the penitentiary and let their fellow prisoners rip their hearts out with sharpened spoons.
- ◯ String the butchers up over the rubble in Oklahoma City and let the families of their victims take potshots at them with the assault rifles these animals so adore.
- ◯ Gather all the conspirators together in one room ... and blow them to bits with a gigantic fertilizer bomb.
- ◯ Bury the fiends alive — in a grave with the babies they murdered.

If none of these punishments appeals to you, tell us what you would do to the mad bombers of Oklahoma City.

When it comes to putting on the dog, Ginger the Great Pyrenees has it all over Judy the miniature pinscher — no matter how fancy Judy's pedigree may be.

But although Ginger appears to be looking down on Judy, the two were actually evenly matched at the Boston dog show where this picture was snapped.

Photographer Arthur Pollack says he was passing by Ginger's grooming table when Judy jumped up to get a better look at his neighbor. He says the two dogs appeared to get along famously in spite of their notable differences.

BRAIN PIERCING!

By TANYA BRODER

LOS ANGELES — Neurosurgeon Raul Vela-Rios has come up with a bizarre new status symbol for jaded members of the X generation: Brain piercing!

The Venezuela-trained doctor charges $5,000 to put a gold or platinum ring through patients' scalps and cranial bone into their brains.

Incredibly, the bizarre brain piercings are considered attractive to thrill-seeking and affluent young men and women — a way to get high as well, the surgeon says.

They ring on the ring and pressure on certain brain tissue triggering a release of certain chemicals that create relaxation and a feeling of euphoria," explained Dr. Vela-Rios, who says the custom has already become wildly popular in Brazil, Argentina and Venezuela. "Once the ring is in, there's no pain associated with the piercing. The only problem I've ever seen is an occasional skin irritation."

The new-wave surgeon says he's performed the procedure on 30 American patients since he came to this city last year. Now that word has spread about the bizarre brain piercings, he's getting dozens of calls a day from people clamoring for the radical new body decoration.

To perform the process, Dr. Vela-Rios shaves the patient's head, then uses a small drill to puncture the scalp and skull.

Using a special curved needle, the surgeon threads a specially braided ring through a high-sensation area of the brain.

"The rings pierce areas of the brain that do not control important movements. Thoughts or emotional responses," the surgeon says. "But they are areas which can trigger euphoria if accidentally messaged. The procedure is whisker to pierce the brain. An amateur would kill someone trying to do this at home."

The surgeon admits that his new procedure have aroused concern in some medical circles, but he says he's not worried about that.

"This is an attractive cosmetic procedure and it's a non-addictive way to get high," the doctor said.

'Bizarre new fad will sweep the nation,' boasts California surgeon

Macho duck hunters beaten to a pulp by bird-watching grannies

PARIS — A group of elderly women bird-watchers saw three men shooting at a flock of ducks and lost all control — and beat the macho hunters within an inch of their lives!

By RANDY MORRIS
Weekly World News

Cops say what began as a verbal plea to the men to stop shooting escalated to a fist-fight when one of the ducks was finally shot.

"We're not violent people," said 63-year-old widow Simone St. Christeben, one of the six senior citizens charged with assault and battery. "But when we saw those men killing that innocent mallard ... well, our tempers just got the best of us."

Police say the women were bird-watching in the woods south of the city when they came upon the three men shooting at the ducks. The women begged them to stop but the men ignored them.

"There was a flurry of shots and one of those beautiful birds fell from the sky," said Mrs. St. Christeben.

"They were vicious," says Jacques Calille, who suffered a badly battered face and two broken ribs. "When arrested one is not sure that they fought with us — it's that they fought so dirty.

"I was still shouting at the ducks when one of them scrambled my nose with her hiking boot. That another lady kicked me in the groin.

"I looked over and saw that my friends were on the ground being worked over by the other ladies."

Viscount Simone "The viscount of surprise" for the beating he took at the hands of the old women.

The other hunter, 6-foot-4-inch Yves Vivien, refuses to talk to the press, embarrassed that he "bumped into a duck."

The question the police is asking is "How could six frail women ... all of them in their late 70s and 80s — overpower three robust sportsmen in their early 30s?"

Parisian psychiatrist Dr. Marie Christeben has a theory.

"When someone looks powerfully about something, they're often capable of superhuman strength. She cites hosts of cases in which a child is pinned under the wheels of a car and the mother lifts the heavy vehicle off him.

"These ladies felt so passionately about the ducks as many women do about their own children."

For pet's sake! What animal lovers really want to know

Should I feed my pet table scraps? What about raw fish? And do pets need vitamin supplements?

Those are typical questions people ask when they call the toll-free pet hotline number 1-800-445-5777 sponsored by Hill's Pet Products.

Here are some of the most common queries called in to the hotline — and the answers from Dr. Elizabeth Hodgkins, a veterinarian.

Q. Can I feed an adult pet the same food that I feed a kitten or puppy?

A. You shouldn't. Young pets require more calories, protein and certain bone-building minerals than adult pets.

You should feed your pet the type of food specially formulated for its age group.

Q. Are dog biscuits helpful in removing tartar from a dog's teeth?

A. They are — but biscuits can add too many minerals to a dog's diet. Instead, use a chew toy to remove tartar, such as a dog bone made of rawhide strips.

Q. How often should I give my pet treats, such as pet candy or cookies?

A. Only about once a week, because frequent treats add excess calories and can make your pet fat.

Q. Should I feed my pet vitamin or mineral supplements?

A. It's unnecessary if you're feeding your pet a high-quality pet food unless your vet recommends it.

Q. Can I feed my pet table scraps that have been cooked?

A. Yes, if you don't give your pet too many high-fat foods such as fat trimmed off meat or leftover gravy.

Q. Is there harm in feeding a pet only cooked or only dry pet food?

A. No, not as long as the food contains high-quality ingredients with a proper balance of nutrients.

Q. Is there any harm in feeding a pet raw meat, fish or poultry?

A. Raw meat, fish or poultry can contain harmful parasites. It's better to cook it lightly before feeding it to your pet as an occasional treat.

Q. How can I get my finicky pet to eat pet food?

A. Finicky pets are usually created, not born.

Gradually withdraw all the treats or table food you've been giving your pet, and the animal will just as gradually get used to eating the pet food.

Graduation day is a unique event in the lives of students. It's when they go out to face the world armed with all the knowledge, insights and experience given them by a faculty that has never gone out to face the world.

Drowned boy's incredible story:

I was brought back to life by the spirit of my dead dog!

By PAT WELLS / Weekly World News

BOZEMAN, Mont. — In an uncanny out-of-body experience, a drowned 7-year-old boy was brought back to life by the spirit of his dead dog.

Dr. William Serdahely said the youngster, who was "absolutely, positively dead" for several minutes, described floating out of his body and traveling down a tunnel — where he met his deceased pet.

When the loving dog licked the little boy's face he returned to his body and awoke!

Many people who've had out-of-body experiences report having seen the spirits of departed friends and relatives — but this case shows that even most beloved pets instead, said Dr. Serdahely, an expert of health sciences.

Dr Serdahely interviewed the boy, whom he calls "Pete," about his bizarre out-of-body experience.

"It began in the afternoon when the boy and a friend were fishing off a bridge. Pete cast his fishing rod and the momentum carried him over the bridge," said the doctor.

"The boy fell into the water, hitting his head on a rock. He was knocked unconscious and sank to the bottom of the river.

"Pete lay submerged at the bottom of the dark and murky river for 5 to 10 minutes. During that time his friend ran and got help and a policeman managed to find his body and drag it up to the bank. But Pete had no pulse and his respiration had ceased — he was dead."

Leading expert reveals [redacted] evidence of [redacted] beyond [redacted] grave

SAVED FROM DEATH! A 7-year-old boy described how he saw the spirit of his dead dog and cat while he was "floating to a special place."

However unbeknownst to his rescuers, the little boy was at that moment in the middle of an out-of-body experience.

Pete later told Dr Serdahely: "I felt like I was floating to a special place where I had never been. I floated into a tunnel and where I was inside it was a little scared.

"Then I saw my old dog Andy and my old cat Abby come over to me in the tunnel. I was really happy to see them because I hadn't seen them since they died a long time ago. Andy and Abby were real sorry now and I felt a lot better with them beside me. I wasn't scared anymore.

"Andy licked my hand and I petted him. Then he put his head right by mine and began to lick my face.

"And that made me come back to my regular body and I woke up in a hospital with people all around me."

Dr Serdahely said that Pete was treated by medical experts and suffered no permanent physical or brain damage.

Noted the expert. "When I interviewed Pete about his experience it was obvious that when Andy the spirit dog licked his face it was a signal that Pete should return to his body.

"Andy was telling him it wasn't his time to die yet."

Man KO's woman for talking in quiet library!

HAMBURG, Germany — Hotheaded library patron Peter Wunsch got so ticked off at two ladies chattering away at a table near him that he strolled over — and bopped one of them unconscious with a book!

The victim, 41-year-old Katrina Bund, was rushed to a hospital and treated for a concussion after her unconscious body was dragged out of the library by police.

Wunsch was arrested on the spot and charged with aggravated assault and is awaiting trial.

"I kept trying to shush them so I could concentrate, but the harder I tried, the louder they jabbered," he said.

"Finally I just flipped and hit her with the only weapon at hand."

Outraged officials wheelchair ramps — at nude beaches!

LOS ANGELES — Ticked-off officials across America are being forced to fork over millions of dollars to install fancy ramps, handrails and rest rooms at nude beaches — so sun worshipers in wheelchairs can frolic [redacted] in the sand!

A court recently ruled that the handicapped have just as much right to bare their buns at the beach as anybody else — and ordered local governments to make it easier for them to wheel their way onto beaches that cater to nude sunbathers.

"That means somebody's going to have to build ramps, railings and special bathrooms for the handicapped at every nude beach in the country — and the cost will be astronomical," stewed one jittery city councilman here.

share from the road. In some cases those ramps and railings may have to be as much as a mile long, traveling over sand dunes and all sorts of things.

"Believe me, I have nothing against working to make life easier for the handicapped. But to spend millions of dollars of taxpayer money just so they can tramp naked on the beach -- that seems a little excessive to me."

But wheelchair-bound Brenda Szydlak, 19, says those ramps will make life a lot more enjoyable for the thousands of handicapped Americans who love nothing better than lying back naked on the beach.

"I know there are some people who think it's just not right for a handicapped person -- especially a handicapped girl -- to go cavorting around with no clothes on," said the shapely lady.

"But I love it because it gives me back the feeling of freedom this wheelchair has taken away. The trouble is most of the nude beaches are so hard to reach from the road that I have to impose on friends to help me get there. A few well-placed ramps would allow me to go to the beach on my own.

"And that's what the law is all about -- to help people like me go where we want to go, when we want to go there without having to plead the special favors from friends."

The bronzed belle says she and countless other handicapped Americans are unbuffing on the beach in their birthday suits as a way of meeting new friends and breaking free from the restraints of everyday life.

"But the truth is, the real reason I do it is because my boyfriend thinks an all-over tan is sexy," mischievous Brenda admitted.

Modern-day Dr. Frankenstein's $50,000 plot to steal Jeffrey Dahmer's brain!

By SCOTTY PAUL / Weekly World News

Cops on two continents have uncovered a diabolical plot to steal the evil brain of mass murderer Jeffrey Dahmer and transplant it in the body of another man

Police in Bucharest, Romania, have arrested two men, including a noted surgeon Dr. Ion Popescu, who is believed to be the mastermind behind the bizarre scheme.

In Madison, Wis., where the cannibal killer's brain is being kept for scientific study, a police source released the following statement:

"I can tell you there was a plan to snatch Dahmer's brain and deliver it to a doctor in Eastern Europe for $50,000.

"We are assisting federal officers in trying to locate two men who were hired to steal Dahmer's brain."

The Bucharest newspaper, Informatia Bucurestiului, reported that Dr. Popescu, 72, planned to transplant Dahmer's brain in the body of another man.

"We consider Dr. Popescu to be a modern-day Dr. Frankenstein, who was booted out of the medical fraternity here for grave robbing and conducting heart and brain transplants on patients and experiments on corpses that, to say the least, were highly unusual," Police Inspector Dionisie Boroianu said.

"We believe that Dr. Popescu was convinced he could turn a mild-mannered person into a monster by giving them the brain of a heartless killer."

An informer tipped off cops in Bucharest that the evil doctor had hired two men to steal Dahmer's brain, the latest who admitted slaying 17 men and boys and eating parts of their bodies.

Dahmer, 34, was beaten to death last November 28 by another inmate at the Columbia Correctional Institution in Portage, Wis. His brain reportedly is being kept in a jar in Madison for scientific study.

Popescu, who admitted he had plans to fly to Wisconsin for a meeting with two accomplices who had agreed to swipe Dahmer's brain for $50,000.

Adopted Allison Forcier searched for her real father for 25 frustrating years — and finally found him when she saw her name tattooed on a stranger's chest!

The stranger was George Jensen Sr, her long-lost biological dad who was a patient at a doctor's office in Vallejo, Calif, where Allison was a medical assistant.

When Jensen took off his shirt to be examined for a routine ailment, Allison saw the names "Billie Jo" and "George Jr." tattooed on his chest.

Allison was born Edith Josephine Jensen and had a brother named George Jr.

"As soon as I realized who he might be, I had to leave the room," said Allison, who had thought her real father might be dead.

George Sr. and his first wife were struggling with a failing marriage back in the 1950s when Allison was born. Three years later, George Sr. left his family and moved to Alaska.

Allison's mother told her father was dead, but she suspected that wasn't true.

"I knew my father would regret when she told him he was her father. But he quickly got her at ease.

"If you don't mind, I'd like to get to know you better," he said. "There has got to be a higher being that pushed us together — this doesn't happen by accident."

Jensen figures it was a "million-to-one shot" that he was reunited with the daughter he'd wondered about for nearly three decades.

Allison and her father have since met in person and have been talking on the phone frequently.

"Twenty or 30 times a day I want to pick up the phone and call him," Allison said. "I just want to hear the sound of his voice."

WHATTA GUY!

Red-hot model used to be a hairy-chested man!

By JOE BERGER / Weekly World News

NEW YORK CITY — Eye-popping pinup queen Monique Fabiette has the kind of curves that drive guys gaga and turn gals green with envy. And mouthwatering Monique's blinding beauty has made her one of the world's hottest models — even though the sizzling miss used to be a man!

"Monique has millions of men around the world drooling over her — and none of them has a clue that she used to be a hairy-chested fellow with a moustache," says French fashion photog Roger Abbet.

"But the truth is, you can't blame guys for falling in love with her, because she's got to be one of the most gorgeous sexy women who ever walked the Earth.

"She's a monument to modern medical science, that's for sure."

As recently as 1983, the Johnny-come-lately lady was bumbling through life as Michael Fabiette, a broad-shouldered, beer-swilling factory hand who longed for the day he could post his family jewels and display into the world as the girl of his dreams.

"I worked with some real rough-and-tumble fellows at the steel mill, and I used my best to act as macho as the rest of them," steamy Monique recalled. "But inside, my heart was aching because I knew God had meant for me to be a woman. I would sit for hours reading fashion magazines and looking at those beautiful models with their long legs — and I'd think, 'Someday I'm going to look just like that.'"

Then, three years ago, excited Michael had the sex-swap operation he'd wanted for all his life — and made his debut as sexy Monique, blonde bombshell and high-fashion model extraordinaire.

"Now I look in the mirror and I just can't believe it's really me — that I really am the person I always dreamed I could be," the wide-eyed beauty-queen told a reporter. "When I walk down the street, men ogle my body and make passing comments. I know they're being crude — but I tell you, those are the happiest moments of my life."

Unique Monique, 24, says her only regret is that she doesn't have the courage to return to the mill where she used to work to show the old gang what the scalpel has produced.

"I like to think they'd say, 'You've come a long way, baby,'" she said.

"But I'm afraid they might throw nuts at me instead."

HOW TO KEEP YOUR CHILD FROM TURNING INTO A LITTLE MONSTER

WEEKLY WORLD NEWS

You can stop your kids from raising hell all the time by following these tips from an expert:

● Make rules and state them clearly in a few words, says Gregory Bodenhamer, author of Born in Control.

Start with a word that tells when your child must do something. Also say what action he or she must take: stop, quit, start, go, don't, be, take, make, fix! For example: "Every Saturday take your clothes to the laundry room."

● When setting a rule, both parents must agree.

● Follow through by supervising your children. If you say, "Please take out the trash," and the child says, "O.K.," but keeps watching TV, turn off the TV — and stay with him until he does the chore.

● Never argue with a child. It puts power in his hands, causes delay, makes you upset and takes attention from the issue at hand. Instead, run through an agreement with these two words: "Regardless" and "nevertheless."

For example, if you're setting a curfew for 9 p.m. and your son says, "Billy gets to stay out until 10 on school nights," say, "Regardless, be home at 9 tonight." When the child responds, "That's not fair," answer him with "Regardless of whether it's fair or not, be home at 9 o'clock if you wish to go out. I'm not going to discuss it further."

● Be consistent. If you're not, your child will realize that sometimes he can get away without doing what you said.

● Thank your child for his cooperation, or let him know you're pleased when he follows the rules.

● Create an atmosphere of love and caring in your home. Start and end every day by saying good things to your child. Spend time together as a family.

PREVENT your child from turning into a monster by following these simple tips from an expert.

"Remember, the easier it will be to get them to obey your rules," said Bodenhamer.

Wishing on a star REALLY DOES bring you good luck

NEW STUDY PROVES!

By [redacted] (Weekly World News)

Your dreams are 46.5 percent more likely to come true if you gaze into the heavens — and wish for them on a star!

That's the word from probability expert Kenyon Reeves, who conducted a five-year study of adult men and women and found that those who wished for things "on stars" were much more apt to report that their dreams had, in fact, come true.

PROBABILITY expert Kenyon Reeves.

"This is highly significant," said the Melbourne, Australia-based expert, whose startling new book, When We Wish, is slated for a summer release.

"For one thing, it suggests that the possibility of something happening can be influenced by thought and desire and possibly even supernatural intervention in human affairs.

"The implications are fascinating. But for the layman, it's probably enough to know that wishing on stars can increase your chances of having a dream come true."

Reeves decided to study the effects of wishing on stars after his 4-year-old daughter asked if the Gemini comet Star Light, Star Bright, which suggests that wishing on a star will make your dreams come true, was based in fact.

On a whim, he undertook the study. And he quickly found evidence to suggest that wishing on stars "is a smart thing to do."

"I decided to keep the study going and as time went on, the validity of the rhyme became more and more evident," said Reeves.

"As a matter of coincidence, you could expect about 4 percent of people to realize their dreams after wishing on stars.

"But 46.5 percent goes way beyond chance. Clearly, there is a direct link between the way we wish and the chances that our wish will become reality.

"My study will continue," he added. "Meanwhile, I strongly advise people to wish on stars if they really want their dreams to come true.

"You really have nothing to lose."

According to Reeves, most people who wish on stars fail to use those basic rules. "They make their wish silently on the first star they see at night," he said. "And they don't tell anyone what their wish was. They keep it to themselves."

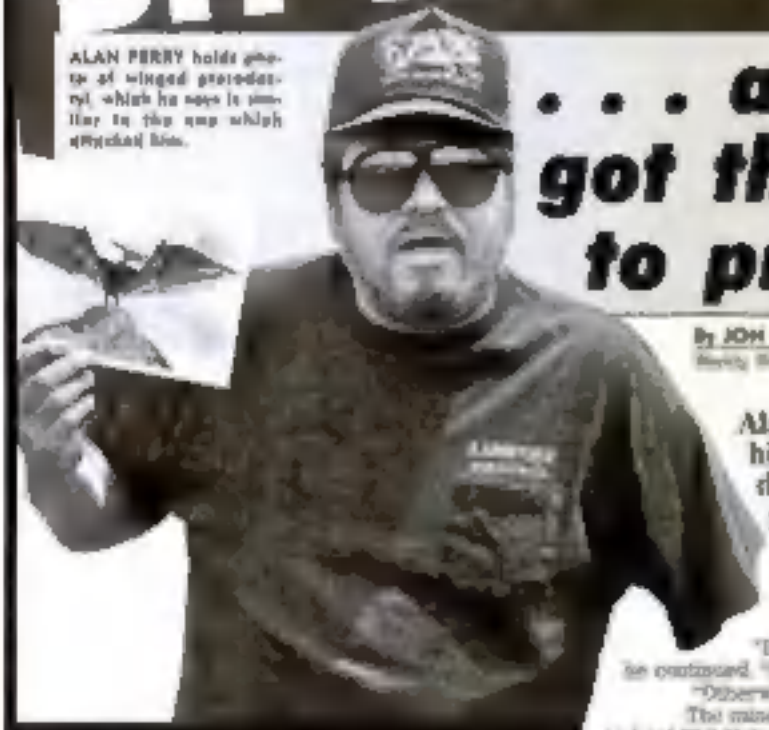
Florida fisherman's shocking encounter with a DINOSAUR!

A PTERODACTYL BIT MY ARM OFF



ALAN PERRY holds photo of winged pterodactyl, which he says is similar to the one which attacked him.

. . . and I've got the stump to prove it!

Weekly World News

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Shellshocked Alan Perry says a 25-foot pterodactyl ripped off his left arm while he angled for bass in the Florida Everglades — and he's got the stump to prove it!

"I don't care what anybody says — I tangled with a dinosaur and nobody but God Himself could ever convince me otherwise," the 48-year-old concrete company executive told reporters.

"It was absolutely, positively the most terrifying experience of my life," he continued. "All I can think is that the Good Lord has big plans for me.

"Otherwise I'd be dead."

The mind-boggling drama began on a Saturday morning in March, when Perry and pal Phil Nelson headed into the Everglades for a day of fishing.

Perry said he was south and west of Delray Beach, in an area so remote that he began to wonder if he had gone too far in his search for trophy bass.

"I've spent half my life in the Everglades and nobody knows them like I do," said Perry.

"But on this particular day I found a spot that I was totally unfamiliar with.

"The fish were biting and I started fishing. He had a hard strike as soon as his plastic worm hit the water, and looking back on it, that's one fish I wish hadn't taken the bait.

"Phil reeled a lunker up to the side of the boat, and I grabbed it with my left hand so I could get the hook out of its mouth.

"I lifted it up out of the water and was wrestling the hook when — BAM! — something flew out of the trees and hit my arm like a freight train.

"The pain was blinding. I think Phil yelled but I really don't remember because I was in shock.

"But I do remember one thing — and it's something I'll never forget. Seeing a pterodactyl fly away, about 5 feet above the water, with my bloody arm dangling from his beak.

"I felt like throwing up. And you know what? I did," Nelson fashioned a tourniquet with a nylon rope to stop the bleeding from Perry's stump.

The 47-year-old contractor said he "broke every boating and traffic law in the book" while getting Perry to the hospital, where he remained for 12 days while recovering from the surgery that was required to repair the injuries to his arm.

Though skeptical at first, authorities now say they "have no reason to think that Mr. Perry is telling us anything but the truth."

"Dinosaurs were supposed to have died out 65 million years ago, and when the man started talking about a pterodactyl, we wrote him off as a nut," said one wildlife official.

"But he stuck to the story. His best friend confirmed it. And a background check shows both men to be solid, respected members of the community.

"The fact is, we receive 10 to 15 reports each year from people who claim to have seen dinosaurs or other large prehistoric creatures in the Everglades.

"Some of those reports are hoaxes. But as far as I'm concerned, Mr. Perry is living proof that something unusual is happening out there."

Nelson said the pterodactyl had "leathery flesh and a wingspan of at least 25 feet."

"It looked like a small airplane flying away with Alan's arm," he continued. "It was the darnedest thing I've ever seen."

In spite of what happened, Perry says he will continue to fish the Everglades "till the day I die."
